

Strategisk Forum

En ny tradition i dansk arkæologi

Jesper Hansen

Abstract

Strategic Forum

- a new tradition in Danish archaeology

A coordinated strategic effort across the archaeological museums potentially constitutes an archaeological super-weapon. So far, however, this has not been resolved by either the broad national strategies or the institution-specific strategies for the individual museums. To address this problem, an initiative is therefore needed that combines the national and the local.

In October 2022, a decision-making forum was established with the ambition to strengthen the research yield and the speed of new discoveries. The idea is that Danish museums, when coordinating the economic forces possessed by developer-funded archaeology, will be able to answer research questions rooted in representative archaeological Big Data, which have so far been out of reach.