

Privatisering af arkæologien vil skade studerende og fagets kvalitet

Andreas Schäfler

Abstract

Privatisation of archaeology will harm students and the quality of the profession

Andres Dobat advocates in Arkæologisk Forum no. 49 for the privatisation of Denmark's development-led archaeology, claiming it would benefit museum archaeology. However, this overlooks the negative impact on students who gain crucial, paid excavation experience under the current system. Examples from Germany, England, and the Netherlands reveal the detrimental effects privatisation could have on both education and archaeological quality.